THE CHALLENGES OF CONSTRUCTION IN 2019

The construction industry is no doubt facing its most significant challenges ever. Everyone thinks they can and are indeed entitled to be contractors. Communities hear promises and see no delivery. Criminals find a new home in extortion in construction under the guise of “economic forums”. Fighting erupts over a dwindling cake. Procurement practices hamstring rather than support construction delivery. Professionals are selling to the lowest payer, products crafted in line with price. The authorities formed to nurture and grow our industry are snugly and silently encapsulated in their comfortable offices while chaos reigns. The rest of the world marches on, adopts new technology and concepts, leaving us in the dust. Will we pick up the pieces or will we wait for foreigners to come and do it?

In this turbulent world, Civil and more specifically Municipal Engineers ply their trade in Local Authorities and in Communities, to the best of their abilities.

This talk will provide a viewpoint of the current industry status, pose challenges and stimulate debate on how our industry, which ultimately delivers infrastructure to the citizens of our beautiful country, can be revived and rescued.
